ABOUT THIS CONFERENCE

Just as Sacramento is the focal point for State legislative activity, FACCC's Advocacy and Policy conference is the centerpiece of policy, information, advocacy, and FACCCtivism for community college faculty. This is the place where you'll receive the most up-to-date information on budget, legislative and retirement issues, and where you'll translate that knowledge into action. It's also the place where you'll honor your colleagues who have organized, mobilized and energized faculty to engage in political action for community colleges at the district and State levels.

TOPICS WILL INCLUDE:

- * How faculty should lobby the 2009-10 budget, including the $50 million request for "Student Success"
- * How community colleges must politically position themselves in the midst of an economic decline
- * How faculty can stand up and oppose outside forces, attempting to hard fought protections in funding, retirement and academic freedom
- * How faculty can successfully advocate such faculty priorities as 75/25, part-time equity and professional development

WHO SHOULD ATTEND

All faculty members are urged to attend. Local union and academic senate leaders are especially encouraged to participate, as well as those who work in categorically funded programs. Community college students are also invited.

"I've learned a great deal more in one Saturday than I have learned in past 15 years."

-K.E. Duncan, Foothill Community College

"I learned a lot which I can use in dealing with my district."

-Cornelia Alsheimer, Santa Barbara Community College

"I made some good connections here."

-Jeffrey Michels, Contra Costa College
